Aesthetic characteristics

Detached house. A renovated farmhouse with some newly constructed areas. The kitchen has large windows which look out to the porch which is covered with slate, which is also used on one of the dining room's walls. Continuity is pursued. The exterior and the interior complement each other.

Architecture

An island distribution with no wall units has been chosen. As a result, the views are maintained and the connection with the exterior of the house is favoured.

The main attraction of this kitchen is the large island that organises space, arranges work and aids the smooth flow of movement. Apart from housing the washing and cooking areas, it allows us to have a large storage and food preparation area.

Perpendicular to the island are the tall units that go up to the ceiling and which hold the ovens, the fridge and the freezer as well as ample and accessible spaces for storing goods.

Highlights

Trend setting aesthetic solutions.

The kitchen is totally focused on design and it combines perfectly with the other rooms of the house. The furniture blends with the house's architecture due to the use of plain handleless fronts which also reinforces the concept of a space destined not only for "cooking".

In this sense, the exclusive opening system of this Intra model is a tribute to discretion. It's a unique design by Santos, resulting from the wish to offer innovative products. This new system combines three basic aspects of kitchen design: innovation, design and quality.

Opening system. Profile

The total absence of a handle is one of the main characteristics of the Intra model. Santos has developed an innovative opening system where the units' profile is adapted so it acts as a handle. This new opening system is being protected by a Utility Model.

Units to the ceiling: Tall units

To optimize the kitchen's capacity the kitchen includes an area of tall units which, apart from achieving more storage room, contains many electrical appliances in a reduced space.

Perpendicular to the island are the tall units that go up to the ceiling and which hold the ovens, the fridge and the freezer as well as ample and accessible spaces for storing goods. The bar handle is functional as well as beautiful, allowing easy access to the interior of the units.
